2. There is only one item which gives me any concern, which is the letter mentioned by _______ in paragraph 5e of his 27 November memorandum. It is a letter of 4 February 1955 from Chempault to Willauer and refers to action by Cabell. It would be quite a coincidence if someone who read these papers had the background knowledge to understand what this meant, but I think it would be prudent if possible to avoid even this remote occurrence. Therefore, if Mrs. Willauer would surrender this letter I think we need not be concerned about the rest of the material from a security point of view. Anide from the security, the 4 February letter contains information which should be handled with the greatest discretion and perhaps at this time in the interest of all concerned it should be destroyed.

27 November 1963

MEMORANDUM FOR: Deputy Chief, Special Operations Division

SUBJECT: Review of Ambassador Whiting Willauer's

Personal Papers

- 1. As requested, I arranged with Mrs. Whiting Willauer to call on her at her apartment in New York City on the late afternoon of Thursday, 21 November 1963. The purpose of my visit was to arrange with Mrs. Willauer for a security review of the late Ambassador Willauer's personal papers. It is Mrs. Willauer's intention to offer these papers to Princeton University because of their historical import.
- 2. I explained to Mrs. Willauer that the Agency was concerned mainly with inadvertent statements with regard to the following:
 - a. The nature and extent of the true ownership of the airline and its subsidiaries.

	or who had volved in negotiations and relationships with the	e old management of the airline. I ex-that this particularly applied to individuals	who are currently involved in other activit	ies in tense areas, such as in Cambo	odia, in Vietnam, and other	ers.

- c. Agency activities on Project
- d. Agency activities in Cuba since the Castro regime came into power.
- 3. Mrs. Willauer indicated her complete understanding of the nature of the Agency concern. She stated that she had already completely reviewed all of the papers and had culled some which did appear to conflict with the Agency interests, as outlined above.

4. At this point, Mrs. Willauer turned over to me a huge mass of documents of all sizes, shapes, and descriptions. I read until almost 0200, occasionally discussing certain documents with Mrs. Willauer. I returned the next morning, and although Mrs. Willauer had to depart for the weekend in mid-afternoon, she made arrangements for me to have access to the papers for the remainder of the day

5. I would summarize my findings on the papers as follows:

and on Saturday. I returned to Washington on Sunday.

- a. The papers indicate that as far as their retention by Mr. Willauer is concerned, he had been surprisingly discreet, more than I had expected.
- b. I found no references to Agency activities in connection with or to the Cuban activities. As Mrs. Willauer noted, the Ambassador had complete access to State and Agency commo channels on these matters, and did not keep personal files.
- as an overt employee, and concerned solely with overt airline matters. They need be pulled out only if it is still important to keep employment by the airline from 1949 to approximately 1952 as hidden as possible. (I recall that when was first considered for assignment to the appointment was considerably delayed due to uneasiness on the part of the Department of State over his earlier airline experience. It may be that this was surfaced to the Government and later to the government, and it therefore no longer requires concealment.)
- d. Many of the papers, particularly those which concern themselves with the change of ownership, refer to the "Bankers", "Al's people", etc. However, this was in consonance with the cover story generally used at the time, i.e. a wealthy group of investors were putting up the monies to finance the airline, and taking over ownership.

Land Like d

There is a letter from General Chennault to Ambassador Willauer, dated 4 February 1955, in which one sentence reads as follows: "In my opinion the whole thing was managed by and approved by Cabell." The next sentence makes a reference to "Allen". The tenor of the paragraph deals with my relief, and the strong suspicions held by the old management as to relationships with | f. There are of course references to in much of the correspondence because of his overt position with the airline. 6. I was more than aware while I was in the Far East that there was a considerable amount of correspondence between the old management - General Chennault, Ambassador - and Mr. Corcoran's office in Willauer, and Washington. They employed a private code system for telegraphic exchanges, and a system of pseudonyms, cryptonyms, and initials for ordinary mail and for safehand letters. These codes were changed frequently. I could find almost none of this correspondence among Whitey's papers. kept the codes and it may be that copies, if any, still exist, are in Mr. office. I was particularly looking for this type of document as being the most likely source of indiscretions. I am attaching herewith the only copy of such a document that I found. Without the true identities, and without an intimate knowledge of the people involved, it would be difficult to make real sense out of it. After a bit of study, I conclude the following: It is from Tom Corcoran to General Chennault in Taipei, probably written in late 1954 The "Writer" referred to is

I would suggest that you quietly show the attached to Mr. Houston. He may have an entirely different interpretation. I feel honor bound to return the attached to Mrs. Willauer. I am sure that she will withdraw it from the collection if you so desire.

7. I plan to spend Thanksgiving with my brother's family, and have arranged to have lunch with Mrs. Willauer on Friday. At that time I will finish going through a series of diaries which I did not find time to finish last week. (I'll have to admit that from Friday afternoon on, I had one eye on the TV set. It was interesting to observe the public reaction in and around NYC.) I will return on Sunday evening, and consult with you next week with regard to any action to be taken on the documents I have noted above.
